

SLEEVES AND CUFFS.

The Former, Though Smaller, Are Highly Decorated—More Variety in Style.

Although sleeves have decidedly diminished, they have by no means reverted as yet to the entirely plain, tight fashion. Several models show close sleeves, but they have shoulder ruffles, puffs and frills large enough to make up for the contraction in the sleeve proper. The most notable peculiarity about this portion of the costume is the adoption of flaring cuffs that fall over the bands, some of them being pointed over the back of the hand and filled in with full gathered lace ruchings; others of bell shape, with scalloped edges bound or embroidered. These cuffs are cut with the sleeve. Other cuffs are set on over the sleeves and have long points at the under-side of the arm. The majority of the new sleeves have ruchings, and although they are not an absolute necessity as yet they probably will be before the end of the season. Nothing improves the appearance of the hands more than soft lace ruchings. Another sleeve has the cuff portion slashed into square tabs. These are corded, with the silk either matching the goods or in contrast, and have the usual lace frills. A few dresses have fancy cuffs made of puffs, plaited ribbon, shirred satin or India silk, and one model has a bracelet cuff made of soft silk and jet.

Dress becomes more and more varied in form and color. Nearly everything is now permissibly worn, and individual fancy runs riot. Capes and jackets are both fashionable and range from the severest simplicity to the greatest elaboration.

The sketch illustrates a dinner bodice of white mousseline de sole. It is gathered at the neck and under a corslet of violine silk, which is trimmed with beaded galloons of a Persian pattern. The galloon forms shoulder straps and a belt. Loops of violine satin extend below the belt, and coques of the same material adorn the shoulders. The sleeves, of mousseline, are puffed and have ruffles of mousseline as epaulets. The collar is also puffed.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES.

Perfect Taste Does Not Run to Extremes. Frail Hat Trimmings.

It is a curious fact that what is in the most perfect taste is never the extreme of fashion. The mode always overreaches itself and degenerates to extravagance. This is no indication, however, that what is unfashionable is in good taste, although to a number of persons who ought to know better this seems to be a cardinal rule of dress. If sleeves are generally worn large, the self considered sensible and truly well dressed woman wears hers comparatively small. When fashion decrees them small, she at once decides that fashion is foolish, so wears them baggy. Scant skirts are her delight when wide ones are in vogue, and her skirts become full as the mode changes to narrow ones. She never seems to perceive for a moment that her varieties are as great as those of her fashionable sisters, and even greater in one way, for they render her conspicuous.

Yellow is much employed for the trimming and accessories of costumes, and green has also a large share of favor. Mauve, however, and all clear violet and purple tones are most fashionable of any.

Tulle, lace and gauze are the dominant trimmings for hats, bodices and skirts. They are fragile, but very pretty while they last. Plaited ruffles of mauve mousseline de sole are much liked just now, but flat trimmings are also fashionable.

An illustration is given of a toilet of straw mousseline de sole. The skirt is trimmed with a wide band of white guipure near the foot, with lace butterflies crossing it at intervals. The lining is of straw silk. The slightly full bodice is ornamented with a band of guipure, which crosses in front and forms a point behind. It is edged with pearls and passes under the belt, falling a short distance on the skirt on each side. The half-length sleeves, of mousseline de sole, terminate under a bow of white taffeta and are partly covered by double epaulets of guipure. The chemise and low, ruffled collar are of white gauze. Coques of white taffeta are placed at each side of the front of the belt.

PURIFINE

Is the disinfectant that the world is talking about. In the United States its merits are becoming known. The people are using it. Purifine possesses many points in its favor over other preparations. It is odorless, and in employing it as a disinfecting agent, does not create another odor as offensive as that which it subdues. Non-poisonous too. That's an advantage—children will meddle; servants misunderstand; then there's trouble. Some one is poisoned.

Those who use it speak its praise in convincing language. Here's one from the Department of Medicine in the University of Michigan.

"We use Purifine and find it very good for deodorizing sinks and boxes, etc., and for washing sponges used about subjects for dissection. W. A. CAMPBELL, Demonstrator of Anatomy."
